Poetry is very revealing, very personal and at times, very painful. If poetry hurts the writer and he has invited the reader to visit that world, then poetry by its very nature can also be painful to the reader. This stands for all emotions of course, so I invite you in to experience my world. ?

Each of the poems in this collection represents a person or place I have known in one way or another. Poetry, by my loose definition, is a placement of words used by a poet to convey ones heart, soul, and mind in such a way that they become intertwined with a reader's emotional heartstrings thus causing a desired response.

It is in this vein that I hope you will see this body of work as one of poetry.

If you enjoy this book of poetry I encourage you to read my recent fiction books entitled "the Migration" and also "the Watercolor Rose"

As this book is published I am following immediately with another poetry book entitled "we had always" with a completely new selection of poems.

Please enjoy and wait for that transference, from my heart to yours.
